

(ISCDC) research project. She has been graduated from Ain Shams University in 2002. Her Master's Degree in 2005 focused on "Social Sustainability", namely "The Impact of Local Communities on Eco-lodge Design Criteria". Whereas, her PHD in 2010 focused on "Facility Management". Since then, the research work of Dr. Laila has focused generally on Facility Management, Construction Project Management and the application of Management as a broad term in teaching Architecture. Up to date, She has published more than 45 papers either in peer reviewed journals, or in international conferences. In addition to publishing three book chapters, and acting as a reviewer in a number of national and international journals, JOC Journal of Construction, South Africa and Ain Shams Engineering Journal, Elsevier, Science Direct.

Youhansen Salah Eldin

Youhansen Salaheldine is an Architect. Ms. Salaheldine holds a Bachelor of Science in Architectural Engineering from Ain Shams University, Faculty of Engineering and currently enrolled in Master's degree Program in Ain Shams University Faculty of Engineering. She has been recognized in both professional and academic fields for over 13 years. She taught courses for undergraduate level in architectural design, working drawings, landscape design, environmental, graduation projects and innovative design for beginner architects. Ms. Salaheldine participated as well as an architect and team leader in projects inside Egypt and outside such as Saudi Arabia where she took part in design, working drawings, shop drawings, details and landscape for residential buildings, office buildings, residential compounds and other complex projects.