

with the financial support of VLIR and Amazon State University, Ecuador. His research interests include drug development, food manufacturing processes, environmental analysis, phytochemistry and pharmaceutical analysis (chromatography).

Nelly Narcisa Manjarrez is a Professor and investigator in the Amazon State University, Puyo, Ecuador. She earned B.S in Agricultural Business Administration Engineer from Quevedo State Technical University, Ecuador; Masters in Educational Research; Master's in Business Administration; and PhD in Economic Sciences at the University from Havana, Cuba. She has held management positions as: Academic Director of the Distance Studies Unit of the Quevedo State Technical University, Postgraduate Coordinator of the Master's Programs in Marketing, Cost and Financial Management, Accounting and Auditing and Business Administration. He research interests include administrations, business and economic.