Abstract

This study analyses government statements related to the issue of the COVID-19 pandemic. This study aims to find out what the Government is saying not to misunderstand the people who hear it. The theory used in this study is the theory of semantic studies. The method used in this study is descriptive because this method is the proper method to describe the data collection results by researchers through observations in the mass media on the statements of research subjects. The result obtained is an explanation that explains the ambiguity of the Government's ambiguous words in providing information related to the covid-19 cases.
