Impact of K to 12 Program to a University's College Freshman Intake

Lalaine Rimonte
Master in Business Analytics Mapúa University, Philippines
ldsrimonte@mymapua.edu.ph

Ericson D. Dimaunahan
Assistant Professor
Mapua University, Philippines
eddimaunahan@mapua.edu.ph

Abstract

A private higher education institution in the Philippines started offering Senior High School and wants to know how the newly established K-12 program in the Philippines affects college enrollment. To determine this, survey method was used and a Chi Square Automatic Interaction Detector Decision Tree was used to interpret the results. Results showed that most senior high school students still want to enroll in a college or university and demographic profiles nor socio-economic status do not affect college enrollment.

Keywords: higher education, decision trees, K12,